This Photoshop tutorial will introduce you to the basic features of Photoshop. Learn to manipulate images in PhotoShop. First, we will cover the basic tools in Photoshop. Buying a DSLR Camera First, we will learn the basic tools in Photoshop. At this time, we don't have a camera, so you will just draw lines with tools, but we will get the basic tools later. Creating a New Empty Document In Photoshop, you have to create a new blank document with the tools that we're learning. You can't just click on a blank space in your document. In the tool bar, click on the New layer button and create a new blank layer. Make sure that you are creating a new blank layer when you create the new document. Getting Started Go to the Select tool and click on the document at the bottom. In the file folder, you will notice that the Explorer window opens. Open the images. Now, just drag the files and drop them onto the document. The tool should be directly over top of the file folder and you can see the files in the Explorer window. Drawing Lines With the Pen Tool Go to the tool bar and select the Pen Tool (P). Once the tool is selected, you can click on the image to begin drawing lines. Your cursor will change and you can see the lines in the image. In this example, the Pen Tool is selected in the tool bar and we're beginning to draw lines on the image. Use the Pen Tool to create lines on your image. You will notice the cursor changes when you draw. When you're done creating a line, click on the end point and the line will continue in the same direction. You can also click on the line and then drag to adjust the length of the line. When you're done drawing the lines, click once to end the line. To set the line color and thickness, click on the line in the Layers window and set the line color and thickness. In the layers window, click on the line to open the Layer Properties window. In the Layer Properties window, click on the Line Color button and change the line color to a color of your choice. In the layers window, you can select a line and click on the Pen tool to create a line on the image.

Report accuses Vikings of violating 20-year-old XFL rule on transfer fees The Las Vegas Review-Journal, Monday, April 1, 2019 The Miami Dolphins and the Minnesota Vikings are seen in the NFL's 2018 Pro Bowl. The league has been criticized for moving it from Miami to Minneapolis in 2017. The NFL on Wednesday rejected the University of Minnesota's contention that the Minnesota Vikings violated a 20-year-old rule by transferring running back Latavius Murray to Miami before the 2017 season. "The Vikings are in full compliance with the collective bargaining agreement and the rules and regulations governing free agency," the NFL wrote in its letter to Minnesota athletic director Mark Coyle. "The Vikings are not required to disclose any proprietary information related to the Murray situation when negotiating contracts with free agents." The letter came in response to Coyle's request to allow Vikings general manager Rick Spielman to attend the Hall of Fame induction ceremony to be held in Canton on Aug. 10. That's a decision that could be made by the Minnesota Vikings' leadership team, and the team said last week that Spielman would not attend the induction, citing league rules prohibiting him from attending the ceremony. "The purpose of the letter is to provide clarity regarding Spielman's request for an exception to the rules and more importantly, address a false story being circulated regarding Spielman's request," Coyle said in a statement. "While there is no rule prohibiting Spielman from attending the Hall of Fame Ceremony on August 10, the matter was discussed in closed session and the consensus was to follow the league rule prohibiting a club representative from attending the ceremony. Spielman and the team's leadership team will follow this same direction." Murray started 13 games in 2016 before breaking his leg the following season. He signed with Miami as a free agent last year after the Vikings let him walk away, and the Dolphins gave him an offer that the Vikings did not match. The Vikings declined to comment on the matter. But ESPN reported on Tuesday that Minnesota offered Murray a three-year deal worth $13 million. It said he turned it down because the Vikings were not willing to increase the value of his contract and also because he wanted the incentive of receiving a six-year deal on the open market. "It will be difficult to buy into the idea that Spielman was not offered

Sex attitudes and sexual behavior among young adults in Pittsburgh: implications for sexual-health promotion. The relationship of sexual attitudes and behaviors to disease risk has been documented, yet few studies have considered the importance of geographic locale for health-related issues. This article presents the results of a sexual attitudes and behaviors survey of 945 urban Pittsburgh residents aged 18 to 22 years, the youngest age group for which an established reproductive health indicator has been documented. The majority of the sample (72.5%) reported having had sexual intercourse. Reported contraceptive use was highest among those who had never had intercourse and was lowest among sexually experienced women. The most significant correlates of having sexual intercourse were sexual attitudes (coital satisfaction and desirability) and number of sexual partners. The strongest predictors of contraceptive use were education and age. The most significant predictors of coital frequency included attitudes, age, and the use of alcohol, cigarettes, and marijuana. In general, significant effects of region on reported sexual attitudes and behavior emerged only in the context of perceived high risk.Q: Can't delete index when creating a new migration? I have a index on a model that I want to delete in a migration, but it's not allowing me to. This is the migration: class DeleteCategoriesIndex "categories_index_name" end end I get this error: PG::UndefinedTable: ERROR: relation "categories_index_name" does not exist I have another index called categories_index, but I want to clear the categories_index one. A: This is because the SQL to run the migration has an index which matches the schema you're trying to delete, not the schema you want to add the index to. If you want to create a new index on categories you should run: create index categories_index_name on categories(name) If you want to remove the current index on categories: remove_index :categories, :name => "categories_index_name" You can't have two indexes with the same name. I was just wondering about the nail polish, and was reading posts elsewhere, such as this one :::: Puttanesca Nail Polish: Puttana is Italian for whore...what??? I know
