Show more Hide lessDaria Chakabari for The Daily Telegraph Iran is suffering from a shortage of cash to pay back foreign loans after the United States withdrew from the nuclear agreement, a senior government official said on Monday. Tehran is running a budget deficit worth $4.3 billion this year, finance ministry deputy head Hamid Reza Moghadam told a news conference, with the shortfall partly because of a fall in oil revenue. Iran also has to repay more than $100 billion in outstanding debts to Russia and China, Moghadam said, adding that it needed to accumulate reserves to cater for an unpredictable global oil market, a sharp fall in the value of the dollar and higher payments to customers such as China. "We have suffered from the US sanctions, of course, because we are a country, an independent country that depends on imported oil and other imports for 90 per cent of our needs," he said. "We are facing higher than average interest rates of 20 per cent or more for dollar loans, which are needed for imports." Q&A What are US sanctions on
