Simple Timer is a small, yet very useful Windows application. It allows you to quickly and simply time-limit ongoing tasks. Simple Timer is a small, yet very useful Windows application. It allows you to quickly and simply time-limit ongoing tasks. The program has three main functions. Set an alarm clock to remind you of an important event. Start a counter to keep track of the amount of minutes that you intend to spend on a particular task or working project. Tell you when the time is up so that you can stop counting. Set alarms To set an alarm you can specify the amount of minutes to go by until your event will take place. For example, you can set it to remind you of an event fifteen minutes before it will take place. There is no time limit, so this is your opportunity to revise the time you will keep as you need to. The counter counts up to the specified amount of time, then triggers an alarm. Features You can trigger an alarm within a specified amount of minutes before the target time. You can also modify the alarm settings, change alert types, and so on. Effortless to use. Unprecedented functionality and refinement. Option to prevent counting overtime. You can launch more than one counter simultaneously. How to use Open the program. Click “Start” > “Create Alarm” to create a new alarm. In the field that says “Minimum time” enter the amount of minutes. “Alarm Type” can be “Visual”, “Voice”, or “Email”. “Alarm Sound” can be “Silent”, “Beep”, “Warm”, “Loud”, “Wind”, “Chime”, or “None”. To prevent the timer from counting overtime, click “Over time”. Choose “Reminder Time”. You can set up multiple reminders if you need to. Start a counter The program starts the counter. To set the time limit of a counter, you can do so in two ways. You can either specify the total amount of time that you intend to use on a particular task, or you
