I have verified it myself, by making an empty file and adding the license details manually after the mathematica8.exe in my folder. you can download the demo version of Wolfram Mathematica 8 from here. Any ideas? A: This seems like a license issue. Looking at the registry key in question, I see that it contains the license file for Mathematica 8 in string format, like this: "C:\Program Files\Wolfram Research, Inc.\Mathematica 8\SystemFiles\Options\Mathematica8License.reg" For Mathematica 9, the file looks like this: "C:\Program Files\Wolfram Research, Inc.\Mathematica 9\SystemFiles\Options\WolframLicense.reg" You can download the license for your specific version of Wolfram Mathematica here. Also, you can download the "EULA" file for Wolfram Mathematica 8 here or here (direct link to the.pdf of the license) Q: 4D isometric puzzle. This is an isometric puzzle. You have to read the whole description before trying to solve it. There is a Dimensional Bridge, which is a two dimensional bridge. It can hold at most 2 people (with each other to each other). On one side of the bridge is a four-sided building. The building has 4 Windows (where 3 of the Windows have an opening and the fourth Window has none). At the bottom of the building is a platform. At one side of the platform there is a bell (not audible on the picture). The problem is: The Dimensional Bridge can only hold exactly two people each with each other. How can you construct the building to fit as many people as possible as possible to the building? A: The minimum of the four windows is when one window has an opening, the other one has a half-circle, and one window is at the corner. Thus, the optimal configuration is four squares where two have windows and two with a half-circle half-rectangle on the bottom bell on a corner The optimal solution is to have the building be a square and the bell be the upper-right. This leaves two people on top of each other, as well as on top
