What's New In?

WhatsApp is one of the most popular ways to text and chat with your friends and family. Desktop Messenger for WhatsApp is a Chrome extension that enables you to view your chat messages, delete them, save them to a file, and much more. Every hour, you receive more than 20 messages, and perhaps all you want to do is receive all these messages at once. Sounds crazy, but a new browser extension from WhatsApp, called “WhatsApp Scanner”, gives you this ability. It makes it possible for you to decide what’s important and get rid of all the unneeded notifications. The browser extension is compatible with the desktop version of the messaging app, which means you’ll be able to get rid of all of them at once. How does it work? “WhatsApp Scanner” is a Chrome extension that will allow you to make your phone more efficient by loading your messages all in one go. Unlike other browser extensions that only save a copy of the messages you receive, “WhatsApp Scanner” saves the contents of all the notifications in an XML file that you can access from wherever you need. To do so, you’ll need to first download the browser extension from the Chrome store (or from this link). Once you have the extension installed, you’ll see a new button on the right of the tabs section. Tap on it and you'll be taken to the full list of notifications received on that day. So how do you start? Here's how the entire process works: 1) Tap on the "Tap to load" button and open up your WhatsApp app. 2) Right below the most recently received notification, you'll see a yellow bar. Tap it to load all messages that were sent to the phone in that day. Remember, some devices will allow you to load more notifications. 3) As of now, "WhatsApp Scanner" is not compatible with messaging apps such as iMessage, Facebook Messenger and Telegram. It will not be available for iOS anytime soon. 4) You may choose to remove all notifications you don't need or just the oldest ones. Pros: Although the tool isn't a universal solution, it does come with a lot of handy features. You can decide whether or not to load messages, and you can select what to save. You can
