What's new in Fantasy Grounds - FG Desert Map Pack:

Warne's "time-travelling" rip-off. Good news: Lord Levi takes the toddler out of the wild for a nice, civilized lunch at the upscale Neiman Marcus. Bad news: he's kidnapped. Or did Levi kidnap the toddler? As far as I can tell, Lord Levi seems to be a frigging saint compared to his devious dad, yet even he makes a slight mistake: During this process, I became aware that my daughter had been taken out of my sight and was safe only because I had casually left my purse on the end of a very large table and had even completely forgotten it was there; it was not until I returned after lunch for the exhibit that I found it, with all of the contents intact and put back in my purse. When I hand it to you, I don't want to return it to the bag in which I had seen it that morning because I know in an instant that it had gone missing. Ah, the world's hapiest mom. So, who really cares if Lord Levi drops the toddler off at school to await his weekly ice cream? Big deal! That's not important, because he's also saved the toddler from stumbling into a miserable life without enough food and shelter! The random act of giving a boy a lunchbox at a time when he doesn't even want a lunchbox—when he's just happy that the other students aren't calling him a streetwalker—and at a time when he needs a heck of a lot more food and shelter than that, turns out to be huge. It was an act of pure charity from Lord Levi, yet his dad won't let him take the credit! Well, he's right. It's a fair question. So, be careful what you wish for, dad! Not every kid is rescued just because he wants one. Has Levi turned into the ultimate Stepford dad? Or were there some other consequences of Lord Levi leaving the toddler alone? Have men ever actually tried to get their sons adopted by those loving character actors on the soaps? I don't know. Maybe there are some guys who would trade their children's character-actor mothers for a hands-on mom, and I'm not sure that's the way this house is run. Maybe Lord Levi's been practicing what he pre
