Q: Unable to run ruby script from crontab I'm trying to use a cron job to launch some scripts. From the command line, they run fine. When I've run crontab -l I get the following # Jobs defined for user nobody here are run by root. User specific jobs are those starting with a $. i.e. If I open a new terminal and type $ ruby /path/to/script/example.rb It runs without any errors. I've configured the cron file so that the /path/to/script/ will be run as the user "nobody" (but it is called the right thing) I've tried /path/to/script/ as the user and it doesn't work. I've tried /path/to/script/ as the user and it doesn't work. I've tried crontab -e and it doesn't work. I've tried crontab -l and it doesn't work. A: I assume you've created your crontab
