What's New in the Photoshop 2020 (version 21)?

The present invention relates generally to a stable particulate containing medium capable of biodegradation and a method of preparing it. More particularly, the present invention relates to a stable-particulate containing medium capable of biodegradation and a method of preparing it. In recent years, there is a growing concern about the environmental problems caused by the waste of solid material such as municipal refuse and industrial waste. Materials which can be utilized as a source for either industry or human needs is desired for the prevention of environmental pollution. Fertilizers such as ammonia fertilizer, ammonium phosphate and urea are widely used in agriculture for increasing the crop yield, and the recovery of hydrogen from the combustion exhaust gas of hydrocarbon fuels such as natural gas and gasoline is an important means for securing energy. A well-known method of preventing environmental pollution is the use of a method of combustion and the incineration treatment of waste. However, the incineration treatment of waste is accompanied by problems that the combustion facilities must be provided, and that the residue after treatment is often discharged directly into the environment without any intermediate treatment. The combustion or incineration treatment of waste must also be realized with a low-cost, stable fuel which is readily available and inexpensive. Fertilizers such as ammonium phosphate fertilizer are used by mixing the fertilizer with agricultural soil. Since the application is often carried out in a farmer's field, it is very important that the fertilizer has no harmful substance such as a heavy metal. The secondary pollution of rivers or the ground water is also a problem. In order to solve these problems, a method for recovering fertilizer from waste has been proposed. For instance, Japanese Patent Laid-Open Publication No. 56-62896 proposes a method of recovering fertilizer from waste. With this method, phosphate-containing waste is incinerated and phosphate is crystallized to recover a fertilizing agent. The patent discloses a method of reducing the waste to have a particle size of about 0.1 mm-5 mm by means of a mechanical crushing means. However, the mechanical crushing means may damage the fertilizer and may be hazardous to the health of human beings. When wastewater from the mechanical crushing means is disposed of directly, secondary pollution of the environment may occur. Moreover, this method is not applicable to the treatment of waste containing phosphate in an amount as small as about 100 parts per million because a reliable centrifugal means are required. U.S. Pat. No. 4,374,775 describes a method for recovering phosphate from waste.
