The code in which I try to read the image is: file = open(filepath, "rb") arr = np.fromfile(file, np.float32) file.close() When I do this, a TypeError is raised: File "pwn.py", line 25, in arr = np.fromfile(file, np.float32) TypeError: expected int I guess this error has to do with the fact that my image is a binary file (a.png) but I do not know how to convert it to a non-binary file (how to convert it to an.npz file). A: Your code is not returning an error, it returns a value. If you don't get an error, check the value of file which indicates whether there is no error or not. I don't think your image is binary though, since a screenshot only shows a small bit of your image. But you can try this to convert it to binary: from scipy import misc from PIL import Image from numpy import array img = Image.open("yourImage.png") img = misc.to_binary(img) Then you can use array to convert it to a float32 array like this: import numpy as np arr = np.fromfile(img, np.float32) If you want to read binary data from a.npz file: from numpy.compat import fromfile import numpy as np npzFile = 6d1f23a050
