Basically, I have some static web pages and a CRUD project. I've set it up so that the static content is served as a standard.cshtml, while the CRUD is a standard.cshtml. The static content is pretty basic: index.html, login.html, signup.html, profile.html, etc. The CRUD pages are also pretty basic, with their own CSS styles and JS scripts. The issue is that the CSS styling (for example, the navbar-sizing) is working fine on the static pages (I've tested this out by including some lines of HTML code at the top of the) but not on the CRUD pages. Here is a snippet from the CSS on the CRUD page, in the element of the tag: * { box-sizing: border-box; font-family: Calibri; max-width: 1000px; } ...and then I added my own CSS styles to it, and the style that I specified is never applied. So, I'm guessing that I have a couple of things to solve. First, where do I have to add the styling that I set above? As far as I know, it has to be somewhere in the 6d1f23a050
