By Joe McDonald Joe McDonald and Carolyn Edds Published 7:27 PM CST Jan 3, 2015 Fire writer Joe McDonald is here with an in-depth profile of Fire forward Joe Johnson. Everyone knows Joe Johnson. The guy who became the face of the Chicago Fire just as it had lost its original face, goalkeeper Sean Johnson, to a season-ending injury. Without Joe Johnson, the Fire couldn't be expected to have as successful a 2014 season as they did. This is the guy who turned a disappointing 2013 season into a spectacular 2014 season for the club. One that will secure his spot as a Fire legend. But who is Joe Johnson? He's known for his hard work, his leadership and his professionalism. But what separates him from the other players in this league is his role as a holding midfielder. Johnson rarely wins the ball in the air. He just can't help but track it. It was the genesis of his hard work on the field. This year, he's gotten better at it. And it's he has gotten better, more comfortable in the Fire's 4-3-3 system is he has gotten more goals. This year, he's had 11 goals as well as seven assists. He's a Top 5 MLS player in terms of goals scored and top 10 in the league in assists. If he can build on this year, he could be a future captain in the league. He has it in him. The hard work and preparation he put in in the offseason have built up to this point. Last year, he barely scored more than three goals. Here's what he had last year: 1. Field of the Invention
