What's new in 2020: THE RIDE:

is a vehicular thriller. It stars Scott Eastwood as the main protagonist, who crosses paths with a number of bad guys, is pursued by a corrupt government, and continues to evade capture like a cat burglar. That's the pretense. In reality, Eastwood plays Matt Scudder, a low-level drug dealer in the pharmaceutical industry. His job is to roll white powders into cigarettes, illegally sell them, and eventually send them out for testing. It's work, it's a steady source of cash, but in the beginning, it's a little boring. In an attempt to spice up the workday, the company offers its employees cash bonuses. Eastwood decides to take advantage. If Eastwood was the cat burglar, the pills themselves are diamonds. Sildenafil citrate, to be precise, although a generic version exists as well. In pill form, it's something of a wonder drug. If you do the math, the wholesale price of one 50mg tablet is $8.44. At 80mg, the price jumps to $19.98. As benefits go, cash bonuses are measly. Call them the 80mg Girls Anyway, if he took 'em, he became "80mg Scudder," a top con man who gets to deal with drug lords and fine up to two major international companies that pay him for the privilege. To aid his work, he employs amateurs to distribute his pills, sometimes to less-influential customers, and sometimes to important figures. Unfortunately for Eastwood, his job sucks up so much of his time and energy that he barely has time to do proper research into his ventures. Hence, he begins to ship the only proven pills on the market, "Brooklyn" or Tadalafil, because the 80mg Girls simply refuse to be taken. (That's right, even an 80mg pill comes in 40mg strengths. It's called "density," because tablets resemble wet dough.) That's why Eastwood needs Valjean, his French source, to transition him into Sildenafil Citrate: Now, he can go for the hard-to-find 80mgs. And go for them he does. Over the course of a few weeks, the officer manages to launder half a million with his help. Eventually, he learns
