Our experts are here to help!.Image caption In a large post-crisis survey conducted by the IMF, nearly half of voters in Greece said they were dissatisfied with their lives Greece's debt-stricken economy could shrink by 8% this year, the International Monetary Fund has estimated.

The IMF said the country was "deeply in recession" and that its GDP would "collapse" this year, possibly slipping below 0%. The IMF's estimate is almost as bad as that expected earlier this month by analysts at the OECD. It comes just days before the beginning of formal talks between Greece and its creditors. The OECD forecast in mid-June that Greece's economy would contract by 6%, with unemployment reaching a new record of 25%.

The IMF has put the country's 2009 economic output at about $276bn, but it warned the figure could fall to $145bn. The OECD estimate is thought to be as low as an 11% contraction. GDP plunge The IMF warned that the world's largest economy, the US, was only beginning to recover from the recession and that growth in developing countries was expected to be weak.

It added that the coming year would be dominated by "austerity" - a contraction of government spending and a reduction in the value of wages and pensions. "Greece faces a deep and protracted recession, leading to a collapse in GDP, with the economy contracting by close to 8% this year, and perhaps exceeding 25% in 2009," the IMF said. Its forecast painted a picture of continuing pain. "Fiscal and cyclical
