The merge lists are then sorted to define an ordering between the lines of the buffer. The output device associated with the queue is then used to display the buffers and their merging lines. For example, a line buffer is merged, sorted, and displayed on a screen with the display lines representing the merging lines. 0 Additional features and advantages of the invention will be made apparent from the following detailed description of preferred embodiments which proceeds with reference to the accompanying drawings. BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE DRAWINGS FIG. 1 is an illustrative diagram of an exemplary embodiment of a display system for displaying a plurality of buffers of regions of a screen. FIG. 2 is an illustrative diagram of the same display system in FIG. 1 displaying the buffers according to a refinement. FIG. 3 is an illustrative diagram of the same display system in FIG. 1 displaying the buffers and the lines. DETAILED DESCRIPTION OF PREFERRED EMBODIMENTS FIG. 1 illustrates an exemplary embodiment of a display system for displaying a plurality of buffers of a plurality of regions of a screen. In FIG. 1, system 10 includes a CPU 12, a plurality of line buffers 14 and a plurality of region buffers 16. A memory 18 stores region buffers 16, and a memory 12 stores line buffers 14. CPU 12 is coupled with display 22 and may include a graphics card. Display 22 may be, for example, a raster-based color graphic display such as a cathode ray tube, an LCD, a Plasma display, a CRT, or a conventional NTSC or PAL CRT or LCD-based video monitor. An X-Y display coordinate system 20 is defined with a horizontal axis 21 extending from left to right in the X-Y direction across the display screen 22 and a vertical axis 23 extending from top to bottom in the Y-Z direction across the display screen 22. A buffer of regions 16 is defined by four corner positions at the top left corner (i.e., 20,0), the top right corner (i.e
