I'm running Photoshop CS6 on a 2.3Ghz dual core laptop with 4GB RAM. I still get the delay when I zoom in the images, even with only 16 MB SxS memory installed. The resolution of my prints is currently 2500 by 2500 px. I have the same issue when using the cmyk prints and a colour proof print! Please help! I wanted to thank you for the great work you have been doing with Daily Boost! I'm impressed with the quality of your annotations and game reviews, and the great work you put into them. I really enjoy the way you structure your reviews, and you always thoroughly document your research with professional quality images. All of your game reviews I find to be very thorough with up to date builds and with great video preview, so I try to read all the way through! Thank you for this! Interestingly, I suspect the changes in other Adobe programs will be quite similar. For example, today, we run into a quite similar situation: I would like to give you a small impression of providing my thoughts on the upcoming Photoshop release, but instead of forcing you to dive into such a complex version, I would like to offer you a few things of general interest, highlight the most important changes for the Photoshop user, and show the interface and workflow when working on Photoshop. So, if you only have a little free time, maybe you want to keep this overview for a later date. That said, I'd reckon you'll enjoy the review.
