This is a great movie. It is the best movie I have seen in a long time. I really enjoyed watching this movie. It is very...Q: Why does asp.net mvc data attribute route a route whose only parameters are the data value and the action method name? I have an asp.net mvc application. I have a view that I am trying to configure an action link to. I would like to have the action link point to a controller action method in another controller but have the only information sent to the action method be the value passed in the asp.net data attribute. However, when I click the link, it hits the correct controller method, but all the parameters are null. Here is my code: [HttpPost] [Authorize] public ActionResult Register(int userId, string phone, string userName, string password) { ...
